Munich, November 8th, 2018

The conference of the independent federal data protection supervisory authorities and the countries (data protection conference) appeals to everyone in the legislative process participants, the EU Commission's proposal for an e-evidence stop regulation.

With its proposal for an e-evidence regulation, the EU Commission create an alternative to the formal legal assistance procedure and the Investigating authorities faster access to communication data make possible. The law enforcement authorities of the EU member states should Be empowered to identify telecommunications and internet service providers services in other member states of the EU and also in countries outside of the EU (third countries) directly for the issuance of inventory, access, Commit transaction and content data.

Then companies based in Germany could publish data to investigative authorities in other EU member states even though the act being prosecuted is not a criminal offense at all in Germany.

This could, for example, be a pregnancy be aborted or a political expression of opinion, if these are requested relevant state is punishable by law. It is also to be feared that third countries

EU regulation as a blueprint for our own regulations.

The Bavarian State Commissioner for Data Protection informed

Those affected only have a legal remedy, if at all, in the request to the member state, but their legal system is usually alien to them is.

The problem of the so-called "data retention" of telecommunications

tion data is exacerbated significantly when foreign law enforcement agencies authorities have direct access to such information.
