Virtual visit of the Transparency Law elective subject group

On December 3, 2021, the students of the Transparency Law elective course at the Rhineland-Palatinate University of Public Administration paid a virtual visit to the Rhineland-Palatinate State Commissioner for Data Protection and Freedom of Information (LfDI). Employees of the state representative explained to the students the role and tasks of the state representative in the area of freedom of information. The participants then discussed cases from the advisory practice of the LfDI and examined the scope of the right to information access and its limits based on the specifications of the state transparency law. Through the visit, the students gained an insight into the day-to-day work of the state commissioner and deepened their knowledge in the area of transparency law

Data protection and freedom of information, Prof. Dr. Dieter Kugelman. "It leads to administrative action being developed in parts. I therefore expressly welcome the fact that the University of Public Administration, where the country's future administrative staff will be trained, has included practical examination of freedom of information in its curriculum. I am pleased that the university, in its 40th year of existence, has The optional subject of transparency law that has existed for a few years proves its modernity and I am happy to support the further development of this subject and thus the openness of the administration in Rhineland-Palatinate".
