Data protection officers strengthen companies

BvD autumn conference discusses the effects of the changed naming rules

Appeal after the easing of the appointment obligation for data protection officers (DPO).

Supervisory authorities and the professional association of data protection officers in Germany (BvD)

e.V. to the companies concerned, not to the data protection know-how of the DPOs waive. Applications from the fields of artificial intelligence (AI), data tracking and Scoring not only made the digital world highly complex in terms of data protection law

Field of work, said BvD CEO Thomas Spaeing. "Who through the relaxed

There is a risk that waiving the specialist knowledge of the data protection officer is not required to be named

To make mistakes."

The State Commissioner for Data Protection and Freedom of Information Baden-

Wuerttemberg, Dr. Stefan Brink, underlined after the first year data protection Basic Regulation that the supervisory authorities intensified their control activities. "Data-

Protection officers are important contacts for us and the companies. you under-support companies in positioning themselves in accordance with the law and thus save time and money to save – not to mention any fines for violations."

The President of the Bavarian State Office for Data Protection Supervision, Thomas Kranig, stated, "the federal legislature will unite the economy with the numerical easing do a disservice. Would have been better to clarify what in a world where everyone with Tablet and smartphone acts with constant employment is really meant. "

And the Bavarian State Commissioner for Data Protection, Professor Thomas Petri, te, "Reliable data protection has now become a trademark. Under-who are now doing without a DPO are giving up an important part of their customer trustworthy price."

Before the summer break, the federal government had initiated the amendment of the BDSG directs, whereby the naming obligation for companies is to be "relaxed": After that Private companies must then appoint a DPO if there are more than 20 people there at all times are engaged in the processing of personal data. So far the border was closed 10 employees.

According to a survey by the specialist magazine "Datenschutz-Praxis", those affected want

Companies 19 percent will no longer name a DPO in the future. 20 percent of the companies that do not have to appoint a DPO under the new rule, but want their data protection organi-do not change.

"Every second company affected by the new regulation has recognized how important it is professional advice from a DPO," said Spaeing. Especially young companies and start-ups that develop new technologies or offer internet services he to appoint a DPO. "Young companies develop their ideas and products in often in what appears to be a legal vacuum when it comes to data protection. But who the requirement cannot meet the requirements of international partners or customers, quickly gets caught up in a advertising disadvantage."

The core competencies of the data protection officers will also be the approximately 200 participants employ, which on October 23rd and 24th under the motto "Economy meets supervision" at the midthe third BvD autumn conference, which is being held this year in Nuremberg takes place. The BvD invites to the conference together with the data protection supervisory authorities those of Baden-Württemberg and Bavaria. Other topics include: Connect ted car, pre-employment screenings, binding corporate rules, cross-border data traffic to non-EU countries, tracking, big data, fines, scoring, data breaches as well lots of tips and tricks from everyday dealings with data protection

Basic Regulation (GDPR).

Speakers include the journalist and columnist Heribert Prantl from the Süddeutschen Zeitung, the group data protection officer of Deutsche Bahn, Chris Newiger, as well as the book author Stephan Orth. In a separate slot, the state authorities assigned daily questions from the participants.

Bavaria's Minister of the Interior, Joachim Herrmann (CSU), will open the authorities' day on October 25th.

In addition to many topics from the everyday life of the authorities, it is also about the possibilities of the technical data protection, the tasks of the DPOs, and data breaches in public rich.
