unsure when it comes to the data protection-compliant use of online learning platforms and video conferencing systems.

The Saxon Data Protection Officer Andreas Schurig explains:

»Advancing digitization means that in schools more and more personal data is being processed – both in teaching as well as administration. Especially because the students and students often still have the necessary awareness of the digital world. Lacking privacy protection, parents and teachers are at this point required. With the information compiled on my website would like
