FOUNDATIONS OF LAW

Yo

Competition

By virtue of the powers that article 58.2 of Regulation (EU) 2016/679 (General Data Protection Regulation, hereinafter RGPD) recognizes each control authority and as established in articles 47, 48.1, 64.2 and 68.1 of the Organic Law 3/2018, of December 5, on the Protection of Personal Data and guarantee of digital rights (hereinafter, LOPDGDD), is competent to initiate and resolve this procedure the Director of the Spanish Protection Agency of data.

Likewise, article 63.2 of the LOPDGDD determines that: "The procedures processed by the Spanish Agency for Data Protection will be governed by the provisions in Regulation (EU) 2016/679, in this organic law, by the provisions regulations issued in its development and, as long as they do not contradict them, with a subsidiary, by the general rules on administrative procedures."

II

Voice as personal data

C/ Jorge Juan, 6

28001 – Madrid

www.aepd.es

The voice of a person, in accordance with article 4.1 of the RGPD, is personal data.

make it identifiable, and its protection, therefore, is the subject of said RGPD:

“«personal data»: any information about an identified natural person or identifiable ("the interested party"); An identifiable natural person shall be deemed to be any person whose identity can be determined, directly or indirectly, in particular by an identifier, such as a name, an identification number, location, an online identifier or one or more elements of the identity physical, physiological, genetic, psychic, economic, cultural or social of said person;”

The voice is a personal and individual attribute of each natural person that is defined for its height, intensity and timbre. Endowed with unique and singular distinctive features that individualize it directly, associating it with a specific individual, it is molded when speaking, being able to know, through it, the age, sex, state of health of the individual, their way of being, their culture, their origin, their hormonal, emotional and psychic. Elements of expression, idiolect or intonation, are also data of personal character considered in conjunction with the voice.

For this reason, report 139/2017 of the Legal Office of this Agency states that "the image as well as the voice of a person is a personal data, as it will be any information that allows to determine, directly or indirectly, your identity

In fact, the Judgment of the National High Court dated March 19, 2014 (rec.

176/2012) says that "the voice of a person constitutes personal data, as

as can be deduced from the definition offered by article 3.a) of the LOPD,

What

<<any information concerning natural persons identified or identifiable>>, an issue that is not controversial.”

Article 4.2 of the RGPD defines "treatment" as: "any operation or set of operations carried out on personal data or sets of personal data, whether by automated procedures or not, such as the collection, registration, organization, structuring, conservation, adaptation or modification, extraction, consultation, use, communication by transmission, diffusion or any other form of authorization of access, collation or interconnection, limitation, suppression or destruction.”

The inclusion of a person's voice in journalistic publications, which identifies or makes a person identifiable, involves the processing of personal data and, therefore,

Therefore, the person in charge of the treatment that carries out the same is obliged to comply with the obligations that for the person in charge of the treatment are arranged in the RGPD and in the LOPDGDD.

III

Right to data protection

This proceeding is initiated because the respondent party published, on the website referred to in the facts, the audio of the statement before the judge of a victim of a multiple rape, to illustrate the news related to the trial in a case which was very media. The voice of the victim was appreciated with all clarity when recounting with all crude details the multiple violation suffered. All this constitutes a treatment of personal data of the victim.

Individuals have the power to dispose of their personal data, including his voice, as well as its dissemination, resulting, without a doubt, worthy of protection of the person whose personal data is disseminated in violation of the legal legal.

Thus, the STC 292/2000, of November 30, provides that "the content of the right fundamental to data protection consists of a power of disposition and control on the personal data that empowers the person to decide which of these data provide to a third party, be it the State or an individual, or what this third party can collect, and that also allows the individual to know who owns that personal data and for what, being able to oppose that possession or use. These powers of disposal and control over personal data, which constitute part of the content of the right fundamental to data protection are legally specified in the power to consent to the collection, obtaining and access to personal data, its subsequent storage and treatment, as well as its use or possible uses, by a third party, be it the State or an individual. And that right to consent to knowledge and treatment, computerized or not, of the personal data, requires as complements essential, on the one hand, the ability to know at all times who has that personal data and to what use it is subjecting them, and, on the other hand, the power oppose such possession and uses".

In this sense, and regardless of the legal basis legitimizing the treatment, all data controllers must respect the principles of treatment collected in article 5 of the RGPD. We will highlight article 5.1.c) of the RGPD that establishes that:

"1. Personal data will be

c) adequate, pertinent and limited to what is necessary in relation to the purposes for which that are processed ("data minimization");"

However, we are faced with a fundamental right that is not absolute, since, if necessary, the Fundamental Right to Data Protection may yield to the prevalence of other rights and freedoms also constitutionally recognized and protected, such as, for example, the Fundamental Right to Freedom of Information, weighing it case by case.

However, in the present case, as we will explain, it must be considered that the treatment carried out by the claimed party within the framework of the freedom of information has been excessive, as there is no prevailing informational public interest in the dissemination of the voice of the victim -without adding any added value to the information keeping the real voice of the victim (without distorting, for example) -, under whose pretext it seems that those data have been disclosed; voice that, added to the fact that it is a highly publicized case, makes the victim clearly identifiable. By weighing the conflicting interests and, taking into account the concurrent circumstances of this case, that is, the particularly sensitive nature of personal data and the intense affecting the privacy of the victim, the interest of the owner deserves greater protection of the right to the protection of your personal data and that they are not disclosed to the intended public interest in its dissemination.

IV

Right of information

In the struggle between the Fundamental Rights to the Freedom of Information in relation to the Fundamental Right to the Protection of Personal Data, even when equal degree of protection is recognized for both constitutional rights, Ordinarily, the first one tends to be endowed with prevalence by our courts, after assess and weigh all the elements at stake.

However, preponderance does not mean prevalence when, having attended all the concurrent circumstances in a specific case, exceed the limits set normatively and jurisprudentially.

In this sense, the Article 29 Working Group in its Opinion 06/2014 on the concept of legitimate interest of the data controller under the Article 7 of Directive 95/46/EC, when examining the legal basis of the legitimate interest of the Article 7.1.f) of Directive 95/46/EC, fully transferable to the current art. 6.1.f) of the RGPD, includes the right to freedom of expression or information as one of the assumptions in which the issue of legitimate interest may arise, asserting that "without regardless of whether the interests of the data controller will ultimately prevail term on the interests and rights of the interested parties when the weighing test".

That said, the Fundamental Right to Freedom of Information is not absolute. We can observe very clear limits established by the courts in the civil sphere, in relation to the Right to Honour, to Personal and Family Privacy and to the Image itself.

Thus, we will cite, for all, the STC 27/2020, of February 24, 2020 (appeal of amparo 1369-2017) that provides, in relation to the image of a person, and starting from the uncontroversial fact that makes it identifiable, that "...the question debated is reduced to considering whether the non-consensual reproduction of the image of a anonymous person, that is, someone who is not a public figure, but who acquires suddenly and inadvertently a role in the newsworthy event, in this case as victim of his brother's failed murder attempt and subsequent suicide of this, supposed an illegitimate interference in his fundamental right to the own image (art. 18.1 EC).

...that criminal events are newsworthy events, even with independence of the character of private subject of the person affected by the news. Without

However, the limit is in the individualization, direct or indirect, of the victim, since this data is not of public interest because it lacks relevance for the information that is allowed to transmit (SSTC 20/1992, of February 20; 219/1992, of december; 232/1993, of July 12; 52/2002, of February 25; 121/2002, of 20 of May, and 127/2003, of June 30). Thus, it is currently recognized by Law 4/2015, of 27 of April, of the crime victim statute, in force since October 28, 2015, when he warns of the need "from the public authorities [to offer] a response as broad as possible, not only legal but also social, to the victims, not only repairing the damage in the framework of a criminal proceeding, but also minimizing other traumatic effects on the moral that their condition can generate, all this regardless of their procedural situation. For this reason, the present

Statute, in line with European regulations on the matter and with the demands that poses our society, intends, starting from the recognition of the dignity of the victims, the defense of their material and moral assets and, with it, those of the group of the society". In cases such as those raised in this appeal, this Court must give relevance to the prevalence of the right to the image of the crime victim against information freedoms, since graphic information became idle or superfluous because the photograph of the victim lacks real interest for the transmission of information, in this case the apparent execution of a homicide and subsequent suicide” (emphasis added).

We will add the STS, of its First Civil Chamber, 272/2011 of April 11, 2011 (rec. 1747/2008), in which, regarding the data necessary to provide a information and the limits to the public interest states that “b) Trivial information is not protects (ATC 75/2006), but the fact of providing unnecessary data in a case of violation (the full name, the initials of the surnames, the portal of the street where the victim lived) that have no community relevance, do not respect the reserve, only seek to satisfy curiosity, produce disturbances or annoyances and reveal unnecessarily aspects of personal and private life, allowing neighbors, close people and relatives the full identification of the victim and the knowledge with great detail of an act that seriously undermined his dignity (STC 185/2002) or about a disease that is not of public interest and affects direct to the irreducible area of intimacy and that is revealed to the effect of a pure joke or joke (STC 232/1993);”.

Likewise, the STS, of its First Civil Chamber, Judgment 661/2016 of 10 November 2016 (rec. 3318/2014), in relation to the capture and disclosure in court of the image of a victim of gender-based violence provided that “1st) The interest of the questioned information nor the right of the defendant television channel to broadcast images recorded during the oral trial of the criminal case, since There is no limitation in this regard agreed by the judicial body. 2nd) The only controversial point is, therefore, whether the identification of the applicant as a victim of the crimes prosecuted in said criminal case, through first plans of his face and the mention of 03/31/2022 his first name and place of residence, was also included in the fundamental right of the chain of television demanded to transmit truthful information or, on the contrary, it was limited by the applicant's fundamental rights to personal privacy and your own image.

3rd) Regarding this matter, the jurisprudence has recognized the general interest and the public relevance of information on criminal cases (judgment 547/2011, of 20 of July), which are accentuated in cases of physical and psychological abuse (sentences 128/2011, of March 1, and 547/2011, of July 20), but has also pointed out, regarding the identification of the persons involved in the trial, that the defendant and the victim are not on an equal footing, because in terms of that one does fit a complete identification, and not only by his initials, due to the nature and social significance of the crimes of ill-treatment (judgment 547/2011, of July 20).

6th) In short, the defendant television network should have acted with the prudence of the diligent professional and avoid the emission of images that represented the recurrent in the foreground, either refraining from broadcasting the corresponding shots, either using technical procedures to blur their features and prevent their recognition (judgment 311/2013, of May 8). Similarly, it should also avoid mentioning his first name, because this piece of information, insufficient by itself to constituting illegitimate interference, became relevant when it was pronounced on the screen simultaneously with the image of the applicant and add the mention of her place of residence, data all of which are unnecessary for the essence of the content information, as evidenced by the news about the same trial published at next day in other media. 7th) The identification of the plaintiff by means of his image and personal data indicated and its direct link with an episode of gender-based violence and other serious crimes, when disclosure was foreseeable Simultaneous or subsequent data referring to how the victim and her aggressor met and the way in which the criminal acts occurred, assumes that the loss of anonymity violated both the plaintiff's right to her own image, by the emission of their physical features, such as their personal and family intimacy, to the extent that some reserved data, pertaining to his private life (which went to the Internet to initiate a relationship or the intimate content of some of their talks), lacking in offensive entity in a situation of anonymity, they came to have it from the moment that anyone who viewed those news programs and who resided in the locality of the victim could know who they were referring to, so that the damage psychological damage inherent to his condition as a victim of the crimes added the moral damage consisting of the disclosure of information about his private life that he had not consented to make public". (emphasis ours).

As we can see, a clear reference is made to the excessive treatment of personal data (some of which are not of an intimate nature) to provide the information, considering them unnecessary at all points in view of the concurrent circumstances. Sometimes the courts refer to intimate data, but sometimes it is personal data that is not intimate, such as, for example, the image of a natural person obtained from a photograph published in a social network or the name and surnames.

Balance between the Fundamental Right to Freedom of Information and the Right Fundamental to the Protection of Personal Data.

In the specific case examined, as we have indicated, the party claimed published, on the website referred to in the facts, the audio of the statement before the judge of a victim of a multiple violation, to illustrate the news of a very media.

Thus, it is not a question, as in other cases examined in the case law, of endowing prevalence of one fundamental right over another, having to choose which one has more weight in a specific case. If not, rather, to find a balance between both to achieve the achievement of the purpose of the first without undermining the second.

The conciliation of both rights is nothing new, since the legislator

European mandates such conciliation in article 85 of the RGPD.

As we have seen previously, the Fundamental Right to Freedom of Information is not unlimited, since the jurisprudential interpretation when confronted with other rights and freedoms does not allow in any case and with full extent the same, but, nevertheless, the prevalence that the courts usually give it can be seen limited by other fundamental rights that must also be respected. Thus observes its limitation when the personal data provided was unnecessary for the essence of the information content.

We must consider the special circumstances present in the supposed examined. It is about a very young woman who has suffered a multiple violation. In

In the published recording, she is heard recounting, with a great emotional charge, the sexual assault suffered in all its crudeness, narrating (...).

In addition, we cannot lose sight of the condition of victim of the woman whose voice, with all the nuances exposed, has spread.

Let us remember, for merely illustrative purposes, that Law 4/2015, of April 27, of the Statute of the victim of the crime foresees a special need of protection to the victims of crimes against sexual freedom or sexual indemnity, as well as victims of violent crimes, both circumstances that concur in the alleged examined.

In this case, the situation of the victim (who is not in the same level of equality as the accused) and what it means to spread your voice with all its nuances, as well as the special protection that the legal system that, without restricting the provision of information, must be done compatible with the principle of data minimization, applicable on the form, the means in which the information is supplied and disseminated due to the immediate effect on the data personal information and the identification of the victim.

Precisely because the evident informative public interest in the news is not denied, given the general interest in criminal cases, in this specific case, it is not about to decay the Fundamental Right to Freedom of Information due to the prevalence of the Fundamental Right to the Protection of Personal Data, but of make them fully compatible so that both are absolutely guaranteed. That is, the freedom of information of the media is not questioned. of communication but the weighting with the right to data protection based on to the proportionality and need to publish the specific personal data of the voice. Such situation could have been solved with the use of technical procedures to prevent voice recognition, such as, for example, the distortion of the voice of the victim or the transcript of the account of the multiple rape, security measures both, applied depending on the case in an ordinary way by means of communication.

At older we have to mean that the victim is an anonymous person and our Constitutional Court, by all STC 58/2018 of June 4, affirms that the public authorities, public officials and public figures or dedicated to activities that carry public notoriety “voluntarily accept the risk of that their subjective rights of personality are affected by criticism, opinions or adverse disclosures and, therefore, the right to information reaches, in relation to with them, their maximum level of legitimating efficacy, insofar as their life and conduct morality participate in the general interest with a greater intensity than that of those private persons who, without a vocation for public projection, see themselves circumstantially involved in matters of public importance, to which Therefore, a higher level of privacy must be recognized, which prevents grant general importance to facts or behaviors that would have it if they were referred to to public figures.

The STJUE (Second Chamber) of February 14, 2019, in case C 345/17, Sergejs Buivids mentions various criteria to weigh between the right to respect for privacy and the right to freedom of expression, among which are “the contribution to a debate of general interest, the notoriety of the person concerned, the object of the report, the previous behavior of the interested party, the content, the form and the repercussions of the publication, the form and the circumstances in which it was obtained information and its veracity (see, in this sense, the judgment of the ECHR of 27 June 2017, Satakunnan Markkinapörssi Oy and Satamedia Oy v. Finland, CE:ECHR:2017:0627JUD000093113, section 165)".

In such a way, that for a matter to be considered of general interest, public relevance, they will be so not only because of the person who intervenes, but also because of the matter to which it refers. Both requirements must be met, resulting, the greater the abundance of what is meant in the previous section, which in the case examined the victim is not a public person; quite the contrary, it is of great interest that is recognized by third parties, so it may involve a new penalty to the one already suffered. The victim is an anonymous person and must remain so, so way that their fundamental rights are fully guaranteed.

In the present case, (i) we are not dealing with a figure of public relevance, in the sense that such relevance is sufficient to understand that it supposes, ex lege, a dispossession of your fundamental right to the protection of your personal data, and (ii) although we are dealing with facts "of public relevance", in the sense that they are revealed as "necessary" for the presentation of ideas or opinions of public interest, that need does not extend to the provision of data that identifies the victim.

C/ Jorge Juan, 6

28001 – Madrid

www.aepd.es

sedeagpd.gob.es

10/17

For this reason, and as expressed by the Supreme Court in its (civil) ruling 697/2019, of 19 of December 2019, the formation of a free public opinion does not require, nor does it justify, that affects the fundamental right to one's own image [in this case, to the protection of personal data] with that seriousness and in a way that does not keep the necessary connection with the identification of the person object of the information.

7th

All data controllers have conferred obligations in terms of data protection, in the terms prescribed in the RGPD and in the LOPDGDD, being able to highlight, as far as what interests us, the proactive responsibility, article 5.2 of the RGPD, the assessment of the risks and the implementation of the measures adequate security. Obligations that are even more relevant when, as in the case we are examining, this is particularly sensitive.

Such obligations do not decay by finding us before a data controller.

be a means of communication.

If we add the diffusion of the victim's voice (with all its nuances), which makes it in identifiable being able to be recognized by third parties, with the factual account that it makes in relation to the violation suffered, there is a very high and very probable risk that may suffer damage to their rights and freedoms. This has happened in other cases. dissemination of personal data of victims of rape crimes. And this, in addition to that with the diffusion of the victim's voice, she is once again condemned to can be recognized by third parties, when it is not a proportional treatment or necessary in relation to the information purposes pursued.
