The data protection reform of 2018 was a good year ago. Most guarantors citizens have already had their first encounters with the new data protection law. Bavarian state authorities and municipalities also often published extensive data protection notices, asked for consent gen in the processing of personal data or behaved otherwise different than before - "for data protection reasons", as it was then called.

Data protection is not only a matter for the data protection supervisory authorities. Every Citizens are called upon when it comes to securing the own space of freedom in an increasingly digitized world. The published by the Bavarian State Commissioner for Data Protection bene book "My data, the administration and I - guide through the World of the General Data Protection Regulation" is intended to provide the necessary information impart know-how.

The data protection guide for citizens first leads to the most important basic structures and terms of data protection law.

The focus is then on the rights of those affected by data protection basic regulation. These include the right to information,

Correction and deletion as well as the right to object. A look at the Data protection supervision and the right to complain shows how affected persons others can defend their data protection rights.

Prof. Dr. Thomas Petri: "With the new data protection guide, I would like

I made the somewhat cumbersome topic of 'data protection law' more accessible to everyone make. The book deliberately focuses on the activities of Bavarian public authorities. This also applies to the numerous Your personal rights - our mission
